YORK MINSTER. The greatest ornament of the city of York, is one of the largest and most magnificent Churches in Europe. The vast building covers the site of a wooden Chapel, put up for the baptism of Edwin, King of Northumbria, by St. Paulinus, first Archbishop of York in 627. Stone churches succeeded this humble start, and when destroyed in turn by fire or foe, each was rebuilt with more magnificence. The present structure commenced in 1170, was completed about 1470, three centuries later. The West Front is considered the most perfect of all English Cathedrals.
